I keep my emotions when I am feeling positive, but when I am feeling negative, I change what I'm thinking about.
When I am feeling positive, I am careful not to express it (such as sadness or anger), but when I am feeling negative, I express it (such as joy or amusement).
When I want to feel less negative, I change what I'm thinking about.
When I want to feel more positive, I change what I'm thinking about.
